Comments: My comment earlier day took cues from this excerpt from The Bitterroot Star :

"There is confusion," said Anderson. "It's hard for the public to get involved. We are asking 'What do you want to see? What's your vision?'" He said the agency was "starting at the foundational level, not any particular location." He said it was important to get to those particulars but the way there was to first describe the "desired future condition that we want and then look at the various ways we can achieve it."
