I am opposed to the prospect of clearing 880 acres of forest within the White Mountain National Park. I have visited and hiked many of the beautiful trails in around much of the area. The recreational areas with the natural park are not only the home of much wildlife and many of US, but are an important element of the atmosphere especially conversion of carbon dioxide to oxygen.

Please consider the negative aspects of the tree removal over such a large area and the long duration of regrowth. In addition, the permanent damage of the process itself with the roadways in and out of the area as well as the adjacent lake.
