Comments: Indeed, hazardous trees must be removed. the problem is in the definition of what makes a tree a hazard. A tree likely to fall on a well-used road - yes. A tree elsewhere that a timber company wants -no. Wildlife also wants that tree. Leave it where it is! Time to reject the premise that the solution to all "problems" in the forest is logging. This is public land. Private industry already has plenty of trees. Contrary to industry claims, public land is not set aside for their profit.
