Comments: This is my second comment, and perhaps there are more to follow - but I felt compelled once again to reiterate how special the land surrounding Lake Tarleton is. The thought of disrupting what is one the best views in the WMNF (if not the entire eastern seaboard) pains me to think about.

As I mentioned in a prior comment, the area means so much to me, more than I can do justice in writing. How can one capture immense beauty and profound significant in a simple comment section? All I can say is for 20+ years now I have spent every summer soaking in the natural beauty of the area, grounding myself in a nearly untouched landscape, and being a better person for it. And when I'm not physically at the lake I'm certainly thinking about it and looking at it - it's my desktop background, I have a print on my living room wall; both aside from get permanent residence it has in my minds eye.

I implore the committee to reconsider the targeted lands, to find another area for this project - one that will provide all the same benefits, but without the great natural and personal costs to the thousands who love this region and the countless who will come to love it in the ensuing years, should it remain untouched
