Comments: The airstrip at Cube Cove is about the only place for a wheel plane to safely land between Juneau and Sitka. If a wheel plane had any sort of issues the Cube Cove strip would handle most any propeller driven aircraft for a precautionary landing.

It is an access point for people to gain entry to the forest for camping, hunting, hiking to go fishing, or to just get out of town.

The airstrip would benefit from regular tree trimming to prevent foliage from over growing the runway and parking area at the south end. It is an asset too valuable to be lost to the aviation communities of Southeast Alaska.
