Comments: Why waste a gross amount of money and risk causing more damage when Cube Cove is healing itself? If the Forest Service really feels the need to play god at least do it in a way respectful to wilderness. That means non-motorized equipment and vehicles.

I know certain people enjoy driving big trucks and playing lumberjack, but they should expend their energies in a less biologically harmful manner.

This is designated wilderness and should be allowed to return to such on its own. What a colossal waste of money and resources this proposal would be if passed. Think about it.
