Comments: Old growth forests and older trees are crucial in the health of forests and our planet. Things exist in old growth forests that exist nowhere else. For example, specific varieties of mushrooms /fungi found in the forests could be species to help with disease, viruses and cleaning up disasters such as oil spills. The interconnectness of various species makes a forest healthy. Old growth forests store carbon in the trees and underground. The forests provide homes for so many plants and animals. Please save the old growth forests from logging and classify them as protected. Thank you so very much.
