Comments: I do not agree with stopping off trail snowmobiling after April 1st. I have been riding in many of these affected areas for close to 20 years and in some seasons, more then 50 times per season. In my opinion, the best time of the year to ride some of these areas are April and even May depending on the snow year we have. Riding in late spring, the snow is usually much more stable and safer to ride in avalanche prone terrain. During the close to 20 years of riding in some of these affected areas, I have not once encountered a bear while riding.
