Comments: When faced with a problem that could do serious damage to everything we love, like climate change, there is one thing we should never do. That thing is to turn our backs on those that can help us. Old growth forests are one of our best allies in this serious time and we want to turn them into ever larger homes that really are beyond anything we really have a need for. If we had been as callous to allies in any war, we would have lost every time.

We are in a battle for the future of mankind and our world. If all we seem to care about is our decadence, we will lose.
