Title: manager tree farm MT

Comments: Small town MN, a town cemetery, and a large very old cottonwood tree, home to great Horned owls, struck by lightening and burned and made front page headlines. The point...destruction of old growth forests is a hoax to those of us who feel ownership of communal property. One can't help wonder who wants the wood from these giants and what buttons are being pushed. The reasons for this destruction have varied over time and that adds to the scrambling of justifying this cutting. Don't cut old growth timber. Don't try to put forth another justification. Just cease this nonsense. MY trees my admiration for standing tall and old.
