Comments: Once they're gone we won't again see them in our lifetime nor will our children see them in their lifetime. The possible monetary gains do not compare to the amount of oxygen they give us or the shade they provide for undergrowth and a healthy forest. Animals plants and birds need these trees. Cutting down old growth doesn't make sense and it sure doesn't go along with sustainable forestry. Everyday we go to work and exchange money for time that we will never get back. Cutting down old growth trees is doing just that. Please don't sell our peaceful magical forest for a new bathroom at a rest stop or a new office or anything. Please keep your word on sustainable forestry and only cut previously logged regrowth and let the old ones retire peacefully just like you hope to do.
