Comments: No, we do not need another upscale resort in Montana. And if we do it belongs on private land.

Public lands should be accessible for all and not require a high income.

For example, Whitefish is entirely uncomfortable unless you are affluent.

We don't need "wilderness experiences" curated by corporations with big price tags.

We need to protect quiet places.

No one needs a curated wilderness experience.

Just walk down a trail.

There are plenty of guides in the area if you need help with that.

Old school basic cabins and lodges are glorious.

If people want more they can go to whitefish or Big Sky or Disney.
