Comments: There is a saying, "Once destroyed, Natures beauty cannot be repurchased at any price."

Growing up my entire life in Montana, I have always enjoyed the simplicity of Holland Lake and the hiking trails. Not to mention all other areas of our beautiful state has to offer. As more people move to our beloved state there seems to be more large corporations that want to bring "progress" and "growth" the community. unfortunately, this proposal is only going to hurt out beautiful Montana forests. The lodge at Holland Lake is currently where it should be in size and business wise. Not only will building a bigger lodge effect the wildlife in the area; it will also limit the opportunity for our locals to enjoy their backyard. Obviously, there are a lot of out of state visitors that already visit this area and stay at the lodge, which is wonderful. Big corporations like POWDR do not have the community or nature in their best interest. They want to come into our state and build BIGGER. Montana prides itself with living simply and living WITH nature; not destroying it by building a bigger lodge in the middle of paradise.

The last thing the Holland Lake and the needs is another lodge that will bring "more money" and greedy people who don't care about Montana.
