Comments: Thirty years ago, my Grandmother Mildred remarked that Holland Lake Lodge is "Just Beautiful"! She was ninety years old, and the Lodge and its "resort weather" reminded her of the old fashioned relaxing resort lodges that she grew up with. At the current lodge, families are able to enjoy recreating the old fashioned way, with easy going activities: paddle boats, swimming, and fishing, followed by a nice meal in the lodge. Small old fashioned cabins can house families just fine. When people recreate in such a special place, they don't need hundreds of people around with lots of big support buildings. Winterizing the cabins makes sense; however, destroying the beautiful natural and old fashioned cultural ambience of the lodge would be insane. This outlandish proposal by POWDR demands more than a Categorical Environmental Analysis. Instead, it requires an Environmental Assessment and/or an Environmental Impact Statement that includes more time for public comment.
