Comments: This is a substantial change with potential for huge impacts to wildlife, the watershed and the very feel and nature of the place. It certainly won't "preserve the spirit and integrity" as the former owner states, or make it more "soulful" as the developers ridiculously claim.

It's turning an old, seasonal, historic hunting lodge built by locals into a large year-round resort built by a large out-of-state "adventure lifestyle" corporation that owns 10 ski resorts. They plan to triple the size and capacity of the place and construct several new buildings, including a 13,000-square-foot lodge with 28 rooms, a 3,000-square-foot restaurant, a 2,000-square-foot welcome center for check-in, and 26 new cabins.

This needs to be subject to a full EIS and comment process.
