Comments: My 3rd comment...at the "informational night" people were asked for solutions. Why should there have to be solutions? It is not the USUS's responsibility to see that someone's investment is viable. If people invested in something without doing their due diligence, then guess what? They may have made a bad investment. The rest of the population has to live with that. Why shouldn't a company that can actually take the hit and still be on business?

If there MUST be a "solution", it would be.....

An environmental impact evaluation is a must.

If that goes through, they can either replace or remodel existing structures in their present locations. No additional structures. No trees taken down. All structures remain current distance to the shore. The current ambiance of the place is retained with applicable upgrades.
