Comments: While I recognize that development is unstoppable and as human population increases worldwide, so will human population and tourism to Montana increase. This will result in more development, some sadly onto open lands and nature, simplicity and that sense of replenishment many of us feels in our forests, rivers and lakes will be harder to find. We don't have much or any say on private land that money alone can transform it from serenity to one person's high tech property but Holland lake lodge is in public land and while it is developed, it is developed to a level that works with sustainable practices mostly. Please, on public lands, keep development limited, conservative, simple and fitting to all of us Montanans. Have it attractable to us residents and not just to outside tourists.
