Comments: This is just crazy! Montana , especially the Forest Service does not need to be in the business of destroying the natural beauty and history of this special place and any other historic places in Montana. Another thing, this whole process smells of something fishy. Someone knows someone and this seems to be getting pushed through for some hidden agenda. People go to Holland Lake and the surrounding areas for the peaceful beauty, the mountains, the quietness, time to be just in nature. Not to see modern day crap. The Forest Service is in charge of keeping our forests, "forest", not in charge of hotel and resort stewards. Yes, they have done things as ski resorts but that is a different story. Like I said this sneaky, for the most part hidden project, smells to high heaven. Leave the pristine areas alone, God doesn't make them anymore, and I don't believe that is what the Forest Service was intended for. To become resort pushers!
