Comments: A friend just informed me of the plans to damage the pristine wilderness of Holland Lake. Tears have been clouding my eyes as I attempt to write and convey the despair I feel hearing this news. I moved to Montana in 1999 and have visited Holland lake several times each year since then. I even had my wedding at the lodge in 2011- my husband sold his bulldozer to pay for it because he knew it was my favorite spot on earth. Now my children love it as much as I do. There is no other place like Holland lake. The rare existence of such beautiful wilderness in this modern age should be fiercely protected, not commercialized, if any future generations might be blessed to enjoy what we've known. The ecology of the lake depends on our stewardship.

Not every facility needs to be modernized. So few places in this world remind us of a simpler time like Holland Lake Montana. Please leave it be.
