Comments: People live in Montana for the natural beauty and setting it provides. Having internet and restaurants and hotels in a pristine backcountry is so wrong. It destroys the ideals of the Montana natural community and impacts the environment and the animals that live there. Why has there been no environmental study? How will this impact the other smaller communities like Seeley Lake that choose to live in a more rustic area?

We have camped at Holland Lake for decades and go there to get AWAY from internet and planned communities.

Do the homework and study the environmental impact before selling out to big money again. Montana is The Last Best Place. Keep it that way!!

Let corporations build an urban "backwoods themed" park and go there and pretend you're there and leave the real thing to people that want to keep it pristine.
