Comments: I'm originally from Southern California I grew up surrounded by concrete, traffic, pollution and way too many people. Of course there are still some beautiful places Mother Natures preserved down there but they were always ruined by trash littered everywhere, graffiti on rocks and trees, and once again way too many people. I moved away from all that to the beautiful state of Montana. Several years ago. I fell in love with Montana's wilderness, landscapes, wildlife and sense of tradition. Montana is slowly but surely being bought up by rich out of states piece by piece, and I promise you they will ruin it. Money opens doors for people but remember it comes with no respect for our land or our state. There will no longer be the breathtaking views, the quiet fishing holes, the crystal clear water, the sacred hunting traditions, and the biggest wide open sky in the world. Please help us keep Montana the last best place.
