Comments: As somebody who lived in the state of Montana for three years and is from out of state I really felt like I should comment on this issue. Holland lake is a very beautiful and scenic area that you can just get away to and be away from crowds, other students, other people or just to spend time alone. I was brought there for the first time by one of my closest friends and we went paddle boarding and one of the things that I remember most vividly was how clear, pristine and quiet everything was. I think building a lodge and having a lot more people there constantly will greatly affect this area in a negative way. Now I understand that people have businesses, and my family had a business. However opening a business like this in a location like this I think is pretty much a bad idea. Native Montanans feel like they are being disrespected and that the state is for sale, and when things like this happen it seems like that is true. Building this lodge is not a good idea and definitely would not receive support locally or from people who have lived in the state. As somebody who grew up in California and now lives in New York I can definitely appreciate the natural speaker itself not just as a state but as an entity in a way. I am against dislodged because I think it will do more harm than good. Holland lake is a truly magnificent beautiful isolated spot and I think that the construction of the Schlage having this development is just truly something nasty that I don't think should exist. Thank you
