Comments: Allowing this POWDR corporation to take hold in Montana will continue to deter the Montana way of life. The "get lost" sticker you see on nearly everyone's vehicle becomes less & less apparent as we allow the corporations to take away from the natural beauty and wilderness Montana has to offer. Although this may have tourist benefits and I'm sure lots of money comes along with it. You lose the most precious thing Montana has to offer, that being the virtue of "getting lost", the true wilderness. By allowing these corporations to come in it makes it even harder for generations of Montanan's to live in their state. Since that influences the housing market and starts becoming more tourist based you see the nearly unlivable conditions for the average Montanan. It will turn into places like Bigsky and now Whitefish. The average Montanan only makes an average of 50K a year. As you introduce these big corporations you drive out smaller family businesses (which give ground to the large corporations). Short term- the profit and revenue is nice. Long term, you've pushed out the virtue Montana holds. Where-as Glacier 10 years ago had hidden wonders and not well known trails and driven routes. Now it's nearly impossible to get into the park, where instead of the smell of pine and fresh glacier water. Now you smell human cologne and perfume, and trails littered with trash and the human footprint everywhere. This is bound to be the same. This is true of Glacier, whitefish, bigsky, and yellowstone.
