Comments: Holland lake is a delicate ecosystem that can not handle increased use. One of the few sustained populations of bull trout exists in Holland lake and any increase in use and development has the potential to impact this threatened species. Montana does not need more wealthy development that is not in line with the use and income of it's residents. Destruction of the current facilities is just wrong, they should be placed upon the national historic registry and protected as part of the quiet and honest history of Montana. Stop the wealthy development.
