Comments: I'm not sure how to solve the problem but monetizing everything is definitely not the way to go. Well I'm not that familiar with this area that we are talking about here the idea that someone would buy it a place with historical and local significance and change it into some kind of racy thing for wealthy people from out of state is just exactly what I'm talking about. It has to be stopped and we have to redirect our efforts and one way to commence on this direction is for people in authority like you just say no this is not how we want to live our lives. And allow them to build something but not to destroy everything and not to convert it into something that it is not now. Nature is incredibly important for all people in this country and the world over. We need to think more about not raping the world at every opportunity. You need to have a longer view and a gentler view. And while I'm not offering a path I'm offering an idea but I believe is it popular idea around the world these days.. respecting nature and all of nature including the Flora and fauna of the globe. Many civilizations have come and gone most often because of thoughtlessness on their part let's not be part of this syndrome.
