Comments: As a Montana resident and outdoor enthusiast, please protect this historic and treasured outdoor escape. The concerns don't stop with the potential expansion of the lodge, which will likely be costly and keep locals from enjoying area, but also, what it means for the general growth of the area. We have seen how areas like White Fish have developed with many out of staters and essentially led to locals and their businesses to be priced out of the area. Places like Holland Lake are truly hidden gems and the draw to the area is the quiet beauty. Once upon a time locals could take day trips to Glacier NP, now even though I am a local, it is difficult to access. Let's not exploit Montana's beauty to the gain of an out of state cooperation that will make another natural beauty difficult for locals to enjoy and change the culture and feel of the greater Holland Lake area.
