Comments: I feel in love with Montana wilderness while travel nursing in the ICU in eastern Montana. I found the wide expansive scraggly landscape to somehow hold the grief I felt after existing in a setting of sterile suffering and death for a such prolonged period. Our public lands were set aside for us. For both primitive recreation and for deep spiritual healing. For rich people and poor. Private industry has no place there. Montana needs to really grasp its own beauty and not allow it to be corrupted. Keep private lands wild and free.
