Comments: Holland Lake is one of those places that make Montana unique. It is small and rustic and exactly what the ecosystem of that lake can sustain. It is the responsibility of the US Forest Service to balance the needs of the public and the fragility of ecosystem. I implore you to step back and do the work need to determine if this new project is sustainable on this small piece of Montana. There needs to be proper environmental impact assessments done. Please take a step back and do this right. Once the horse is out of barn there will be no going back.
