Comments: I'm sympathetic to the idea of expanding cabin rentals on Holland lake, but absolutely not if it involves the destruction of historical preexisting cabins that will be replaced in a money-making pursuit of luxury and exploitation. Holland lake doesn't need a massive restaurant and a lot of luxurious cabins. It is a hidden gem, chosen for its quietness and serenity. Please do not allow Holland lake to be turned into a zoo. It is so peaceful. The Forest Service has a unique job, now more than ever, to balance the interests of protecting the forest as it is and expanding access to the amazing features it has to offer. This is a very fine line, as I'm sure most are well aware. But the more we allow big companies to create elaborate tourist-centered compounds, the more we take away from the simplicity of nature, why we go there in the first place. Holland lake should not be a destination chosen for its amenities and fine dining, rather its solitude and the chance to immerse oneself in nature. Please be cautious with the project.
