Comments: I currently live in Jackson Wyoming, please look at our expansion failures when you consider the proposed Holland Lake project. We've grown and grown, and gone from a mountain town to a resort town, and it has literally benefitted no one. The wildlife suffers, the locals suffer, and honestly the guest experience suffers in the end because the reason they chose to visit, a rural western community, no longer exists. Please try to consider if there is any benefit, other than financial gain for the OUT OF STATE owners, before moving forward with this project. I believe you will not find any positive outcome if you really take the time to think about it. It seems like in it's current iteration, Holland lake lodge is already packed with tourists, there is no need to build massive structures in an attempt to draw more tourists. Please don't go the way of so many other rural areas that sold out everything that they once were. The number of truly old, rustic, historic, and rural destinations in the USA are decreasing every year, let's keep some around for our children to enjoy.
