Comments: Powdr's goal, whether they realize or not, is to homogenize the Holland Lake Lodge. Powdr is not even really true to their own 'adventure lifestyle' claim, especially if you ask a Montanan. Skiing at a resort or staying in a fancy hotel isn't the kind of adventure (if you can call it that) that Montanans look for. They look for independent, LOCALLY OWNED and operated companies or guides if they even decide not to go alone. This is all without mentioning the impact that an expansion will have on the surrounding wildlife. I have not seen much mention of the environmental impacts but I'm sure that in a remote area like Holland Lake there is a plethora of flora and fauna that would be displaced during construction and also by the steep increase in human interaction, both in terms of amount of people and time when people are around.
