Comments: The Swan Range and Holland Lake are a place where local Montana folks and out of stater travelers have always gone to get away from the hustle of daily life. I don't think that a large corporate company has the objectives of preserving its character or the lives of Montanans. It's a pure place and as much as a corporation wants to say they are in the game of preserving that space and making it more useable, it's all about dollar signs and exploitation of our state. Just like out of staters are swiping up all of homes and making them into nightly vacation rentals. I don't think it's in the best interest of our locals or the wildlife. And should be left the way it is. I know a lot of us feel this way, Montana truly is the last best place and I would hate for a big company to come in a ruin it like they have some surrounding states, including Utah.
