Comments: My husband and I love this area of Montana. Since the Holland Lake Lodge sits on US National Forest land, it seems odd to sidestep the normal approval process that a large development project on public land justifies. Why is the public comments period so brief? Why does it seem like this development is already done deal? Why is this project not subject to the same rules and procedures as similar or smaller projects? Where is the normal Environmental Impact Study? There are too many unanswered questions ... And only 21 days to have a public discussion! What's the huge rush? Follow the money.
