Comments: This act and loss of land for future generations and the devastating effects that come with it will last ages. We have sensitive fauna and flora that depend on these areas as well as the beautiful people that live and work here and are already struggling with the demands of tourists and lack of infrastructure. There's no place to handle more capacity. There's barely enough staff to keep some of the local establishments that have been established for many years in these communities open. This is only helping more wealthy individuals and families to come in and we are only covering the issues. We need to focus on our own low income and affordable housing before housing people on vacation. As well as potentially bringing in more seasonal workers, from my experience they also try finding housing here after they visit and work. Where local Montanans have been struggling with housing for years and still do.
