Comments: As a lifelong Montanan who grew up enjoying the natural beauty of Holland Lake, I am entirely opposed to the expansion as proposed. I love this state, and am excited about the ways it can grow and change. But big corporations coming in with sights set solely on profit take advantage of our natural resources and disregard the impact on local communities. This project needs environmental assessment, and the forest service ought to PAUSE, and take time to consider how Montana - and the Holland Lake area - might grow in closer alignment with our state values. There's a reason outside entities want a piece of what we enjoy, and it's because we've been intentional with its care for so long. Why let them capitalize on it now, without at least giving some thoughtful and prudent guidelines? Montana's growth, and our future, deserve more.
