Comments: Montana has been a state subjected to out-of-state interest and money before, and it will continue to be. To lose Holland Lake to more of this is difficult to think about. It's been a special place for so many of us. Open shorelines and lovely mountain tops that are often still dusted with snow in the summer. I understand the draw...but just because it's beautifying doesn't give money the right to build it out. They will develop it to suit their own needs without regard to the ecology and preservation of public lands. Prices will drive up and locals will be pushed out. I hope that the agencies responsible to hold developers accountable will step up and push back. Soon Montana will be a place where most of can't afford to be and the wealthy will have degraded the environment in the name of "being Montanan". Tired of private jets flying overhead every hour. Tired of the disgusting imbalance of power and wealth. Tired of a trashed and abused environment. Tired of entitlement. Tired of disregard for the people and cultures who were here first.
