Comments: As a resident of the valley, I find it completely irresponsible for there not to be any environmental impact assessment to be completed. Our valley is already under strain when we consider climate change, the population growth, and increase in tourism. Furthermore, it is completely disrespectful to try to push this through, knowing there will be an impact but not having any assessment to identify what those impacts are and to what extent an expansion would impact the environment. How would these impacts be mitigated? Who would foot the bill for them? How is it legal or okay that someone can exploit the public land without doing its due diligence? It is outrageous to me that anyone would think this is okay. If they want a facility expansion in a place they claim to care so much about why would they not want an environmental impact assessment? Stop letting people prey on Montana's public land in exchange for profits and egos, it's disgusting.
