Comments: This project sounds very ambitious and huge. My main concern is this will turn Holland Lake into a rich person's playground and take both access and its beauty away from the public. Any project that is done should be reviewed carefully in terms of its scope in size, and major major opportunities for access, including camping and day use for the public at a very very reasonable cost should be included. Holland lake is a gem and one of the reasons I moved to Montana in 1987. For it to become a rich person's playground would be awful. Please preserve access and the general character, though I understand how some development can be a very big economic boom to a rural area. Once it is developed, there is no going back. Perhaps the project would be best scaled back and combined with large public Access area. The public I'm sure would also bring economic stimulus even if it is not richer people buying condominiums and staying at pricey temporary accommodations.
