Comments: As someone who used to be a resident of Montana, hearing the news of this is very upsetting. The further commercialization of private lands for parking lots, luxury hotels, resorts and winter sports degrade environments and take away land for everyone. Making this location a commodity isn't going to increase access for the general population.

A better idea would be to keep the lake as is, add more resources and resort style condos/parking lots to the nearest town, and then add park rangers to assist with the protection of the land. If it's too hard to increase resources to a town and hire park rangers for this process, then the project should be reconsidered
