I do not feel that the proposed expansion is acceptable. First, the lake is simply not large enough to handle the projected amount of additional watercraft. The last time I was up there it was already crowded with an assortment of watercraft, actually sort of dangerous with the mix of power boats , kayaks, canoes and paddle-boards. I understand the boat launch, allowable boat size and docks are to be enlarged and located near the Loon nest. They'll leave and take a portion of the lakes charm with them. They are stressed enough as is. What about the human waste generated by such a large expansion? If any thing expand the campgrounds that everyone can share vs. thirty some private cabin/homes. The Forest Service should just say no.
