Comments: The tagline 'The Last Best Place' remains in place for one reason, because Montana cares about its lands and preserving the beauty of the wild. Holland Lake remains one of truly the most untouched natural gems. I grew up just across the highway and spent most childhood days at the lake and every summer I visit and marvel at the beauty, unchanged and rugged. While Holland Lake is something I would like to selfishly keep a secret, I'd love to share it with more people so they could experience the slice of heaven that Holland is. However, I think whatever expansions are planned must be held to the same standard the rest of the structures around the lake are. This new development sets the precedent and we must remain accountable. Save Holland Lake, keep the last best place.
