Comments: Hi,

Holland Lake Lodge has historical significance to our area. The lodge, originally built in the 1920's and rebuilt in the 1940's after a fire, has been a local favorite for generations. Its rugged beauty and the beauty it adds to Holland Lake are a part of our shared history.

Because the lodge exists on public lands (though the buildings are privately owned), it is part of the public's domain. And because of its local significance through generations of shared experience, any changes should be minor to retain its historical value to the public and to retain the understated, rugged beauty the lodge adds to the lake.

Once the changes are made, it is very, very difficult to go back.

Thanks for your consideration,

David Holley
