Comments: I very strongly disagree with the "development" of Holland lake. The preservation of such a beautiful location, where the only human touch is campgrounds and trails, is far more important than commercial tourism. The way it is now encourages tourism but with an appreciation of nature. A resort would simply destroy the experience for anyone wishing to see nature in the way it exists, without so much road noise and a building on the otherwise untouched horizon. Keep our public lands public, and more than that affordable to see. The resort will immediately exclude anyone who cannot afford to stay at one, and make nature less accessible, which should not be the goal of anyone who truly cares about the forests of this state.
