Comments: Holland Lake is a special place to many - both people and wildlife. The lake provides an accessible (both in price point and for those with limited mobility!) way for so many to enjoy a bit of the majestic ecosystem that lays beyond the waterfall.

I have always been grateful that the US Forest Service was responsible with stewarding this entrance to the Bob Marshall Wilderness area. It seems that now the USFS is not doing their job. To allow a development of this size without any Environmental Impact Assessment feels ludicrous and like they have jettisoned their duty.

I am in opposition to this project and deeply hope that the thousands of other letters submitted in addition to my own help ensure that Holland Lake remains a piece of what makes Montana "The Last Best Place (period)" instead of "The Last Best Place out of state corporations found to extract wealth."
