Comments: When I heard what was going to happen at Holland Lake I felt devastated. I grew up in and around Missoula, and while I understand that with population growth comes new residents, I can't help but grieve the way it used to be. I grieve when I could hike at my favorite spots and not be told what to do with my dog, while picking up other peoples trash. I grieve my favorite camping spots I can no longer get because the fancy RV is always there. I grieve a quiet escape and time for reflection without the crowds. It's hard to even get into Glacier to show my kids places from my youth. So while the rest of this area is being overtaken and commercialized, turned into something without soul, only profit, can we please have one retreat, one escape, untouched?
