Comments: Two years ago, I stood on the edge of Holland Lake with my family. A trip back to the place where I really found myself years ago when I was a student in Montana. No, not born and raised. But educated in The Treasure State. So much has changed in Montana in such a short amount of time. So much industry, so much tourism. Don't get me wrong, it's a joy to see people enjoying so much of the things that I have come to love about Montana over the years. But I want my daughter to be able to give her children the same experiences that I have given her every summer for the past 6 years in Montana. One of those in an untouched Holland Lake hike. A chance to enjoy the stillness of the lake, the serenity of the hike with a view overlooking the lake that is without eyesore. Please, I beg of you do not allow further commercialization of the Holland Lake area. Please, please preserve the beauty of this area and do not allow POWDR or any other company to come in and take these things away. We have to little of these untouched pieces of land left available. If folks want to come to recreate - let them do so in the way that Holland Lake is in its current state. Let folks unplug, let them enjoy the great outdoors with additional hoopla.
