Comments: Thank you for this opportunity. I have grave concerns about the proposed development at Holland Lake, an entry site to the Bob Marshall Wilderness. I feel this development is not a Montana quality. I feel it will have more degrading aspects than what is currently there. As a native Montanan, I am so frustrated with all the development and a lot is being done by out of state interest groups. One only need look at Glacier National Park. It's so crowded, it's so overrun, it's being environmentally degraded, and it's not that enjoyable any more. Many thoughts come to mind; how long till it's gone and we've ruined what we came here for. If Montana is the Last Best Place, and in my mind that is now debatable, then we must protect its wild spaces. That's why people want to visit Montana. We must be the stewards of this great state and protect our habitat for us and the many generations to come. Big developments, like the proposed Holland Lake development, are turning Montana into Disneyland. Please, let's set a new course for the future. No big developments next to pristine wilderness. When is enough enough? Thank you, Glenn Moffatt born in Shelby, Toole County, Montana.
