Comments: Hello, I'm formally objecting to this proposal of development. I don't object to individuals to whom they may be. I object to what is and has been a growing concern for me, and my fellow like minded Montanans.

This project may seem like it comes from a good heart, but I feel it is misguided. I do cherish the idea of people having access to the woods. Being able to escape. To develop an understanding to what we are losing, or to what we may have lost. Its cool and beautiful to have these rustic lodges sprinkled through out the state. Part of the magic is how old they are and how few. They represent a time of when the wilderness was still vast. Where we felt like the resources were that of unimaginable object. It simply gets lost in translation when you propose these resort ideas. It's a facade to a culture and a lifestyle. These experiences are best left small and unique. It's a way to leave less of a footprint, and more of an impact for people's experiences, and for us to share the remaining wilderness. Too long have we gradually sold our lands to corporate exploration and exploitation. What this plan here is a slippery slope to the degradation of one of the few remaining jewels we have left. The Mission Valley. Please reconsider this action. I plead to you.t Preserve it. So that future generations still have a chance to find where we all came from.
