Comments: No. This expansion of Holland Lake Lodge will involve the cutting down of many trees, the paving of gravel paths and large parking lots, the expansion of access roads, and the loss of animal habitat. This plan cannot go forward without an extensive environmental impact review, since it is apparent that a large area of the environment will be effected.

It is also a concern that this private company will be expanding it's footprint on public land. The "public" will no doubt be only the people able to afford the lodge and it's expensive cabins. Where does the average Montana camper or hiker fit into this plan?

Who does the Forest Service serve?

Please take a closer look at this invasive plan before letting the developers destroy what cannot be replaced.
