Comments: Holland Lake is a rare and precious ecosystem, critical habitat for Grizzly bears, wolverines, Canada lynx, Bull trout, and many other fragile species. This small, isolated mountain lake also happens to be the gateway to the mighty Bob Marshall, one of the most spectacular wilderness areas on the planet. Moreover, it is PUBLIC LAND, and there should be absolutely no consideration of selling it out to private corporations for the sake of a quick buck. Unfortunately, Montana is now in the death-grip of politicians who've made no secret of their plan to sell off our beloved public lands and wild spaces to line their own pockets.
